"Flight has always enchanted me. As I grew older, I learned about the repercussions of flight. After I graduate I aspire to work and improve the commercial aviation field. Specifically, I hope to revive supersonic travel in a sustainable, accessible, and eco-friendly way. To reach my ambitious goal would be to save time for millions of travelers every day and aid our planet from the immense damage we humans have already done."

"I plan to pursue an undergraduate degree in Sociology to further understand our society and how to make change in it. I have researched, written, and delivered speeches on mental health, femicide and conflict-related sexual violence. I also volunteer in my town and participate in local events focused on women's rights. My long-term goal is to earn advanced degrees in both Women's Studies and Law. I want to fight women's rights in order to improve their lives."

"The 97% drives me. This number represents the 97% of women that have been sexually harassed, but more so a number that motivates me to push for a change in our society. Studying public health makes me admire the power that science has in our society. I hope to be involved in public health studies in the future as a gynecologist; serving as a healthcare advocate, and an educator, committed to utilizing my skills to elucidate the health impact of structural stigma and inequity."

"What drives me is my passion for my chosen major and career path - Cinematography and Filmmaking. I have really learned to enjoy the process of taking a vision and finding creative solutions through the art of capturing video to tell stories. Telling a story can be as simple as entertainment, but also as powerful as moving an idea into culture. I am excited to see where this career path will take me."
